Whitney Benefits has been named Donor of the Year by the Council for Resource Development, a professional association for grant writers and foundation directors for community colleges based in Washington, D.C.

Susan Bigelow, Sheridan College's director of grants and development, made the announcement at the Sheridan College board meeting Thursday.

The Sheridan College Foundation nominated Whitney Benefits for the award because of its longtime support of the college, including donations of land and a $1 million endowment for a nursing chair announced last year, Bigelow said.
