Did taxpayers get fair share in sale of CMS property?

Editor:

$2.5 million is the rumored price paid for the taxpayers' equity in the Central Middle School property.

Where did every dollar go? Did the taxpayer get a fair share?

These are legitimate questions. The taxpayer should know the answers. The Catholic congregation should know the answers.

The Whitney board should know the answers. The City Council should know the answers.

We are talking about taxpayer assets; God or the devil is in the details.

Which one is it? Do you know? An occasional letter to the editor by a village idiot is not going to cut it.

Now is the time for you, the taxpayer, to quit viewing this as a spectator event and demand, demonstrate, yell, and shout for the answers.

If you cannot get the answers, then remember when you read a book or someone tells you about our nation's endangered values, you need not look afar, it is here in the No. 1 Western town in America.
